Inclusive Excellence Workshop

Ouch! That Stereotype Hurts
January 28, 2-4 PM
400 A-C TUC
Presenter: Tracy DuEst

Demeaning comments, stereotypes and bias have no place in today’s organizations, yet few people have the courage to speak out against these attitudes and behaviors. This program gives people easy-to-use techniques for putting an end to disrespect without blame or guilt. This workshop will:

- Depict and show the impact of common stereotypes and bias
- Help identify reasons people sit silent in the face of disrespect
- Enhance your skills for speaking up against stereotypes and keeping the workplace respectful

Presenter: Tracey DuEst, M.Ed.
Senior Education Specialist- Corporate Education
TriHealth

Tracey is currently a Senior Education Specialist & Diversity & Inclusion Consultant for TriHealth. She has over 12 years of experience teaching & facilitating workshops in both the public and private sectors. She has extensive experience as a facilitator specializing in diversity & inclusion, bullying, team building, coaching, and instructor leadership. Tracey is also currently an adjunct faculty member in the Education Department at Xavier University and has worked extensively with multi-racial families and other diversity issues. She is a regular guest speaker in various local forums on issues of race, gender, sexual orientation, and other dimensions of difference. Tracey completed her M.Ed. in Humane Education and did her thesis work on the impact of human differences. She is also a Certified Enneagram Teacher & Trainer through Enneagram Worldwide, Certified in the Enneagram and Coaching Program, and considers the Enneagram one of her primary tools for continued introspection and growth. Tracey is currently studying with Pacific Educational Group and has attended Courageous Conversations About Race Level 1 & 2. The framework has enabled her to facilitate deeper "Courageous Conversations about Race" in our community. She considers her children Trey and Tera her biggest teachers and a major reason why she has dedicated her life to being on the cultural proficiency journey.