Kami Pothukuchi, Ph. D. is an Associate Professor and founding director of SEED Wayne (Sustainable Food Systems Education and Engagement in Detroit and Wayne State University), a campus-community partnership dedicated to building more sustainable food systems. She will discuss her research on the links between food and community and economic development including urban agriculture, community food assessments, local policy and planning.